ARE the Dead Alive?

In the October Delineator starts a remarkable account of what has been done to date by various scientists working in various countries to unravel the mystery of life as it is revealed to us by the agency of death. Do the dead really live? You are confronted by a subtle question here. Strange things are happening—no doubt have been happening these thousands of years, but only now man is beginning to get a faint understanding of what they mean. Telepathy, clairvoyance, clairaudience, trance and spirit writing, dual personality, possession, levitation, materialization—these are strange and new terms to which is being added an even stranger and newer significance.

We are living in a time when brick and stone are not near as solid and impenetrable as they used to be, and space is not nearly so empty. The clouds are hardly more evanescent than we, and our houses and the things which we consider so solid and durable are as shadows only. All the world is awakening to the idea that force is the great thing—a strange great ocean of unknown force, which storms and rages about us. And man, on his little planet, is like a sailor in a little boat, or a bird in the ocean of the air. Whither comes he? Where does he go?
